POLITICAL STRATEGIST TO DESCRIBE FUTURE OF REPUBLICAN PARTY

F. Clifton White, described in Theodore H. White's "The Making of the President, 1964" as "a technician of politics--one of the finest in America," will predict "The Future of the Republican Party" Tuesday evening at the University of Montana.

White is a consultant in the field of public affairs education who devotes his every both to teaching and practical politics. His background includes university assignments, consulting work for industry and business, and first-hand exposure to national politics.

In politics, White's experience extends from precinct to national level. During the 1960 presidential campaign, he served as director of organization for the nationwide Volunteers for Nixon-Lodge. Most recently, he created the campaigns that resulted in the drafting and nomination of Sen. Barry Goldwater as the Republican presidential candidate. Thereafter, he organized and directed the Citizens for Goldwater-Miller Committee, considered in many political circles the most effective citizens' operation in the history of major political parties.

White is the founder and former president of Public Affairs Counsellors, Inc. and has conducted public affairs training programs for many industrial clients. Currently he is president of F. Clifton White & Associates, a national public affairs consulting firm.

A graduate of Colgate University with honors in the field of social science, White has been on the faculty of Cornell University, where he did graduate work in government, and Ithaca College. He also has lectured on political strategy at Harvard, Yale, Rutgers and Michigan State.

Dr. Thomas Payne, UM professor of political science, will introduce White before his address which will begin at 8 p.m. in the Journalism Auditorium. He is sponsored by the ASUM Program Council and the University Public Exercises Committee.
